

Video Storytelling Internship

Washington, D.C.

Washington, D.C. has the highest rate of homelessness per capita in the U.S. and is one of the most economically divided cities in our country. Street Sense is looking for a culturally-conscious videographer passionate about elevating the voices of those living without housing and using their stories to engage the community to take action.

Street Sense has evolved from a print newspaper into a full-spectrum media center and we're making a push to create more original video content to engage our digital audience. As a Video Storytelling Intern, you'll write, shoot and edit videos that 1) give the homeless men and women we work with a platform to tell their stories and 2) raise awareness of Street Sense and its mission—all while adding projects to your professional portfolio.

This position will provide you the freedom and flexibility to tell stories that you want to tell. We're building our video program from the ground up, and we want your innovative ideas to help shape our future.

Internship periods: Fall semester, spring semester or summer

Compensation: This is an unpaid internship. Academic credit can be provided.

We're looking for someone who...

- Has experience filming with DSLR cameras.
- Has experience using Adobe Premier or a similar NLE video editing software.
- Is enrolled in or recently graduated from a media arts or journalism degree program or a related field of study.
- Has a strong ability to craft creative, engaging narratives.
- Is experienced in conducting video interviews.
- Is passionate about elevating the voices of the homeless community.

Preferred but not required qualifications include...

- Experience creating short, social media-friendly videos (particularly those geared for Facebook).
- Experience creating video content for a digital media publisher (website, blog, digital newspaper, etc.).
- Knowledge of content marketing strategies and best practices.
